Spotlight Symphony

A hush falls soft on velvet air,
Where shadows wait in quiet prayer,
The curtain breathes, the moment swells—
A thousand silent, pounding bells.
Then—light.

A single beam cuts through the dark,
Ignites the stage, a glowing spark,
And in its glow, a story wakes,
With every step the dancer takes.
Each movement sings without a sound,
A whispered note, a rhythm found,
The spotlight hums, a guiding tone,
Yet somehow leaves them all alone.

Arms like violins that soar,
Feet that echo wooden floors,
A symphony of breath and grace
Paints fleeting music into space.
The light will fade, the curtain fall,
Applause will rise, then silence call—
But in that beam, for just a while,
The soul performed... and dared to shine.

Have a great recital girls!
